EDITORIAL

Dignity in Childbirth

Dignity in childbirth is dependent on access to evidence-based, obstetric care.

Lancy K. Lowe

REVIEW

Factors Contributing to Infant Overfeeding with Hispanic Mothers

Findings suggested that Hispanic mothers are more likely to practice nonexclusive breastfeeding, initiate early introduction of solid foods, and perceive chubbier infants as healthy.

Diana C. Cartagena, Susanne W. Ameringer, Jacqueline McGrath, Nancy Jallo, Saba W. Masho, and Barbara J. Myers

RESEARCH

Low Socioeconomic Status Negatively Affects Sleep in Pregnant Women

Psychosocial factors such as perceived stress, financial strain, and low household income disrupt sleep quality during pregnancy.

Michele L. Okun, Madeline Tolge, and Martica Hall

Predictors of Medication Adherence Among HIV-Positive Women in North America

Adherence self-efficacy and symptoms of depression predicted antiretroviral medication adherence among HIV-positive women.

Lynda A. Tyer-Viola, Inge B. Corless, Alison Webel, Paula Reid, Kathleen M. Sullivan, Patrice Nichols, and the International Nursing Network for HIV/AIDS Research

Effect of an Educational Intervention on Cardiovascular Disease Risk Perception among Women with Preeclampsia

A simple telephone intervention improved women's understanding of their cardiovascular risk after pregnancy complicated by preeclampsia.

Patsy M. Spratling, Erica R. Pryor, Linda D. Moneyham, Ashley L. Hodges, Connie L. White-Williams, and James N. Martin, Jr.

190 Adult Birth Mothers Who Made Open Infant Adoption Placements after Adolescent Unplanned Pregnancy

Qualitative data suggested that these women perceived their open-adoption decisions as difficult but best choices.

Lynn B. Clutter

200 A Descriptive Study of Transient Neonatal Feeding Intolerance in a Tertiary Care Center in Turkey

These descriptive clinical findings suggested a new diagnosis of transient neonatal feeding intolerance that can be effectively managed with close observation and supportive nursing care.

Mehmet Nevzat Cizmeci, Mehmet Kenan Kanburoglu, Ahmet Zulfikar Akelma, Naile Tufan, and Mustafa Mansur Tali

205 Comparison of Complication Rates Between Umbilical and Peripherally Inserted Central Venous Catheters in Newborns

In this retrospective cohort analysis, there was no significant difference in removals due to complications between peripheral and central venous catheters.

Inge Johanna Jacoba Arnts, Lawen Maria Bullens, Joannes Martinus Maria Graenewoud, and Kian Djen Liem

216 Heat Loss Prevention (Help) After Birth in Preterm Infants Using Vinyl Isolation Bag or Polyethylene Wrap

Preterm infants who were randomly assigned to thermal protection using vinyl isolation bags after birth experienced significantly less temperature decline than infants wrapped in polyethylene.

Seda Çağlar, Duygu Gözen, and Zeynep İnce
