RESEARCH

Using a Team-Centered Approach to Evaluate Effectiveness of Nurse—Physician Communications

Nurses and physicians rarely used team-centered communication strategies.

Brenda Matzke, Susan Houston, Ute Fischer, and Martha J. Bradshaw

A Feasibility Study to Assess the Effectiveness of Safe Dates for Teen Mothers

Program participants had significant positive changes in attitudes and behaviors associated with responses to anger, gender stereotyping, resource awareness, and psychological violence perpetration.

Judith W. Herrman and Julie K. Waterhouse

Development and Psychometric Testing of the Attitude Toward Potential Pregnancy Scale

This new scale may be useful in practice to predict women's potential for unintended pregnancy.

Mary T. Paterno and Hae-Ra Han

A Randomized Controlled Trial to Improve Outcomes Utilizing Various Warming Techniques during Cesarean Birth

In this three-arm trial, usual care, warmed fluids, or warmed underbody pad were compared during intraoperative care.

Lisa Groff Paris, Melody Seitz, Katie G. McElroy, and Mary Regan

729 A Comprehensive Description of Postpartum Pain after Cesarean Delivery

Using a computerized version of the McGill Pain Questionnaire, the multidimensional nature of cesarean pain is described for the immediate postoperative period and at 6 weeks postpartum.

Emily G. Chin, Catherine Vincent, and Diana Wilkie

742 Effect of Trunk-to-Head Bathing on Physiological Responses in Newborns

Body temperature recovered more rapidly in neonates bathed from trunk to head compared to those bathed head to trunk.
