

Soldiering on in silence

Meeting the needs of military sexual trauma victims

Antidepressant drugs & pregnancy

The time for RCTs is now—page 11

Overlooking depression?

3 medical chart items that may highlight risk—page 27

Journal of psychosocial..
SERIALS

002604
bib:13399108125

1,396
bath

SLACK
INCORPORATED

002604

JPN PSYCHOSOCIAL NURSING

AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

February 2013
Volume 51, Number 2

Pharmacology Focus

- 7 Product Update
- 9 Clip & Save: Drug Chart Hypertension
- 11 Antidepressant Medication and Pregnancy: Time for Randomized Controlled Trials
Robert H. Howland

Original Articles

20 Military Sexual Trauma: A Silent Syndrome

An increasing number of veterans are returning home fearful, intimidated, and ashamed. Be ready to reach out to those affected by sexual abuse within the military.

Ann W. Burgess, Donna M. Slattery, and Patricia A. Herlihy

27 Missed Opportunities in Primary Care: The Importance of Identifying Depression Through Screening, Family History, and Chronic Disease Management

Community health centers serve the most vulnerable populations, but depression risk may be overlooked in these settings. Learn about 3 medical chart items that could identify mental distress.

Ann H. Maradiegue and Fakiha Khan

37 Reflective Assignments in Mental Health Nursing Courses: Factors to Consider

Interested in using reflection exercises in your psychiatric nursing course? This article presents emotional, intellectual, and practical factors to consider before the assignment reaches the classroom.

Michelle Cleary, Jan Horsfall, and Glenn E. Hunt

Sections

- 4 Guest Editorial
- 8 News
- 15 Update on Adolescent Motherhood and Postpartum Depression
Teena M. McGuinness, Bonnie Medrano, and Ashley Hodges
- 42 CNE Quiz
- 48 NARSAD Art
- C3 Information for Authors