What is social connectedness?

Defintion, determinants, and outcomes

Long-term care staffs' perceptions of resident-to-resident bullying

Identifying fall risk using a wearable sensor

Electronic clinical alerts to decrease high-risk medication use

Assessing fall characteristics via depth sensor videos

Evidence-Based Practice Guideline

Persistent pain management

FEATURE ARTICLES

34 Bullying in Senior Living Facilities: Perspectives of Long-Term Care Staff

Resident-to-resident bullying is a prevalent phenomenon, for which staff need detailed policies and training programs to effectively intervene when it occurs.

Felicia J. Andresen, MA; and Jeffrey A. Buchanan, PhD

43 Definition, Determinants, and Outcomes of Social Connectedness for Older Adults: A Scoping Review

The current study proposed a clear definition of social connectedness by explicating its key features and indicators and described the conceptual relationship between social connectedness and loneliness identified from the literature.

Hannah M. O'Rourke, PhD, RN; and Souraya Sidani, PhD

53 Activity Monitoring and Heart Rate Variability as Indicators of Fall Risk: Proof-of-Concept for Application of Wearable Sensors in the Acute Care Setting

A single wearable sensor to monitor cardiovascular response and physical activity patterns in hospitalized patients was shown to be feasible and could have potential for screening markers that contribute to increased fall risk.
